Councilmen Ignore Legal Advice, Pass Ordinances

Circleville city councilmen Tuesday night ignored their legal adviser's previous admonitions in a flurry of ordinance-decrees followed by passage of the same legislation.

The affair came up when the city fathers voted on two $500 appropriations—one for Ted Lewis Park and the other for City Hall.

IN EACH CASE the vote was 5-1 with the city solicitor's ruling declaring unanimous approval was required in each case.

The lone city park "no" vote was cast by Councilman Boyd Horn whose vote irked Councilman Robert Adkins. On the City Hall ballot, Adkins voted the single "no" in a "you-scratch-my-back-and-I'll-scratch-yours" attitude.

The first ordinance read called for a $500 appropriation from the general fund to the playground fund for maintenance. A vote was taken on suspension of the rules to permit immediate passage, and the result was unanimous approval.

This was followed by a vote on the ordinance itself. The result was a 5-1 vote in favor of passage. Horn accompanied his negative with an explanation.

He said he could not bring himself to "yes" to an ordinance appropriating city funds for playground use when there were

Ag Officials Claim Dairy Product Prices To Go Up

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3—The government told housewives today that they can expect to pay higher prices for dairy products in the months ahead.

The Agriculture Department made this prediction on the basis of a seasonal drop in production and an advance in price support levels for butter and non-fat dry milk solids.

Dairy farmers have been receiving 59 cents per pound for top grade butter and 57 cents for lower grades.

A support increase which ups all grades three cents a pound has caused an "increased storage movement" by dairymen.

The department also noted a sharp upswing in the family use of margarine and lesser use of butter since 1942. About 66 percent of families reported they used butter in 1948 compared with 85 percent in 1942.

Pickaway County soon will know whether it has the "world's only left-handed, right-hand fiddle player."

W. E. Danison of Washington Township, who lays claim to the select title, will defend his claim against two challengers during the Ohio State Fair in Columbus late this month.

Danison has been challenged to prove his claim by L. L. Barry of Ostrander Route 2 and Doris E. Nickols of Stockport Route 1. The three will saw away on their fiddles at 2 p. m. Aug. 30 in the Little Theatre in the state fairgrounds.

The local man calmly winked away his fears Wednesday when he confided he would "put on a show for the boys—I been practicing up some more."

New Zoning Law Provokes Exchange By Councilmen

A question concerning the progress made on preparation of a zoning ordinance for Circleville was raised by Councilman Boyd Horn during Tuesday's night's meeting of council.

Horn said he had understood when the ordinance creating the city zoning and planning commission was passed that the commission would report to council periodically on the progress of the zoning plan.

"But they haven't done it," he complained.

Councilman Robert Adkins pointed out that the commission had not reported because the plan was not completed.

"But we ought to know something about it as they go along," Horn insisted. "As it stands, council doesn't even know what they're doing."

HE SAID THAT the commission has been handing out building permits, but that no report has ever been submitted to council. Adkins explained:

"Those are two different things. The zoning ordinance can't be presented to council until it's finished. The building permits that are issued are not the concern of council. Unless a builder appeals to council over the commission's head, which he has the right to do, council has nothing to do with it."

Horn said Adkins didn't understand him. What he wanted to know was why had there been no report on the progress of the zoning plan. He said that members of the commission had promised to submit periodic explanations of the work as it progressed.

Adkins repeated that the zoning ordinance had not been completed, and that council would have the opportunity to examine it closely after its finish.

There the matter rested.

Curbs On '5 Percenters' Filed In New Senate Bills

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3—Two bills were introduced in the U.S. Senate today to curb the activities of Washington's influence-peddling "five percenters."

This development came after Army Secretary Gray was asked to tell Congress whether he knew anything about a reported $25,000 Army uniform deal involving alleged "five percenters" James V. Hunt.

Chairman Hebert, (D) La., of a House Armed Services Subcommittee, said that Gray will be invited to testify tomorrow.

The two Senate bills, offered by Sens. Mundt, (R) S. D., and Ferguson, (R) Mich., are designed to curb "five percenters" by forcing them to identify themselves and by setting up an agency to give businessmen information on government contracts.

HEBERT EXPLAINED that the order would have permitted Army officers to buy uniforms directly from the Army instead of through retail establishments. The subcommittee chairman said Gray will be asked whether Feldman's suspension was connected with the story told by Cummings. Hebert added that Cummings has agreed to repeat his story under oath.

THE MUNDT bill would:

1. Require all persons, who, in return for a fee, help businessmen get government contracts, to register with Congress in much the same manner as lobbyists are required to register.
 2. Set up an "office of information" within the new centralized government purchasing agency which would provide businessmen with all the information they need to apply for government contracts.
- The Ferguson bill would:
1. Require all persons holding government contracts of any sizeable amount to inform the agency with which they deal whether they employ outside "consultants" or former government employees to help them get the contracts.
 2. Set up an information agency similar to the office provided in the Mundt bill.
- The bills were introduced after the two senators met with Jess Larson, administrator of the Office of Special Services—the government's new purchasing agency.
- Hebert told newsmen that he had been informed by Stanley Cummings, secretary of the National Association of Uniform Manufacturers, that Hunt once told a group of manufacturers he could have an Army order reversed for a $25,000 fee.
- The order in question was issued by Maj. Herman Feldman, the quartermaster general, who was relieved of duty July 16 pending an investigation of "irregularities."

Panel Abandoning School Aid Bill

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3—The House Labor Committee today has virtually abandoned hope of reaching any decision this session on the thorny issue of federal aid to education.

The issue touched off a controversy between Francis Cardinal Spellman and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt over whether parochial schools should receive federal assistance.

The committee is scheduled to make one more attempt to work out a measure that would win approval. But there are indications that even this proposed session may be forgotten for this year.

HISTORY IS REPEATING

Draft Office Here Is Due For Another Tapering Off

It was a lusty infant in 1940 when Congress decided that arms were more potent than speeches. Selective Service was made a law of the land, and more than 16 million young men signed their names on an equal number of government forms.

Throughout World War II the act was a powerful agent for starting or stopping conversations. Birthdays and Selective Service went hand-in-hand as conversational topics.

The war ended and the act grew feeble. It expired March 31, 1947, and birthdays were once more occasions to celebrate.

Then on June 12, 1948, the act was revived. It became known as the Selective Service Act of 1948, and it called for young men 18-26 years old to register.

A total strength of 2,005,882 men was needed, and indicated that 30,000 men each month would be called during 1949.

But enlistments increased, and the generals and admirals said so many men would not be needed after all. Selective Service was put on the shelf, but the boards continued to function. They mailed out reports and signed up new men. Expenses stayed high.

Now another blow has fallen. Pickaway County Selective Service board, and presumably local boards throughout the nation, has been ordered to cut expenses.

Starting Aug. 20 the board will employ a clerk in the office only one day a week. Mrs. Betty Heath, clerk, said notice will be given later concerning the particular day chosen.

Truman's Veto Expected On Farm Parity Extender

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3—A Republican farm leader in the U. S. Senate says he expects President Truman to veto the House-passed bill extending 90 percent of parity price supports for another year.

Sen. George D. Aiken of Vermont believes that Mr. Truman could not afford to let the legislation stand in view of the firm opposition expressed by Agriculture Secretary Brannan.

Educators Mull Over Plans For New Northend School

Circleville board of education Tuesday night mulled over plans and specifications of the proposed new northend elementary building.

The current plans, drawn up for the educators by F. F. Glass of Columbus, retained as the board's architect, call for four classrooms and five other smaller rooms.

Carl C. Leist, president of the panel, said no action was immediately forthcoming on the plans since the board has not yet received "clear title" to its selected site on the Goeller land.

Also, Ray Davis was absent from the meeting because of vacation while James I. Smith is hospitalized in Columbus. Leist, Mrs. Lillian Moore and J. O. Eagleson were the only three members present during the session.

LEIST CITED that the board might now purchase a similar plot in the Goeller tract momentarily but that it was waiting until its original selection becomes cleared and the deal is consummated.

The plans considered by the panel Tuesday call for the new building to be situated north and south on the plot, with two classrooms on each side of a hallway which would extend the length of the structure.

One set of the two classrooms, according to the tentative plans, would call for a small platform stage in one end of one room and a movable wall separating the two rooms. Leist said that would permit the classrooms to be converted into a long auditorium for the youngsters within a matter of minutes.

In addition to the classrooms, the specifications presented by Glass included space for a kitchen, foreseeing the possible need for a cafeteria in the future; a storage room; first aid room; office; and a room for the heating plant.

Leist explained that the board will hold off final discussion of the plans until the site is cleared and until more of the members are present.

Tommyguns Used In Daring Raid

Rita's Inlaw Says Thugs Are 'Stupid'

CANNES, Aug. 3—Four bandits firing tommyguns held up the enormously wealthy Aga Khan and his wife in their automobile near Nice today and reportedly escaped with jewelry valued at about $600,000.

They grabbed a jewel box and fled, but were called "stupid" by their victims for failing to take highly-valued gems worn by the Begum, wife of the fabulously rich Indian sportsman and father-in-law of Rita Hayworth.

The London Evening Star in a telephonic interview with the Aga Khan quoted him as saying: "They pointed machineguns at our hearts and threatened to kill us."

"They were stupid and inexperienced," said the Begum, the former French woman, Yvette Blanche Labrousse.

"They forgot to take the jewels I was wearing, including a bracelet clip of the highest value."

THE DARING robbery occurred near noon and followed yesterday's holdup and robbery by four masked bandits of a famous jewelry store at Deauville, resort area on the English Channel on the opposite side of France.

French police erected barricades on the roads leading from the area, which is 525 airline miles from Deauville. They saw a possible link in the two great jewel robberies.

The 74-year-old Aga Khan, spiritual leader of the Ismeeli sect, reported the theft to the police. An exact appraisal of the loot has not been made yet.

The Aga Khan, his wife, maid and chauffeur were going to Deauville to visit Miss Hayworth and Ali Khan, who are expecting a baby.

The American screen star and the Aga Khan's son were married last May 27 in a great display of luxury at Ali's villa on the Riviera.

The group in the Aga Khan's black Citroen automobile had gone only about 150 yards down the road outside the villa gate when the men opened fire and punctured two tires of the limousine.

The chauffeur pulled up at the side of the road, the bandits grabbed the jewel box and fled. (Continued on Page Two)

'Fear' Is Factor In Any Slump, Sawyer Claims

CLEVELAND, Aug. 3—Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer today pointed to fear alone as the "potent factor" which may bring on a sharp nationwide recession.

The government's chief business diagnostician told a Cleveland news conference that only "the accumulated effect of apprehension" can cause the nation's economic structure to crumble.

He said he is neither "optimistic, pessimistic or fearful" concerning a possible depression, but pointed to the fact that 59 million Americans currently are employed as an indication that the economic structure still is fundamentally sound.

The government's chief business diagnostician, in Ohio after a 10-day tour of New England, Detroit and Lansing, Mich., declared that "generally, there's nothing wrong."

gle "no" in a "you-scratch-my-back-and-I'll-scratch-yours" attitude.

The first ordinance read called for a $500 appropriation from the general fund to the playground fund for maintenance. A vote was taken on suspension of the rules to permit immediate passage, and the result was unanimous approval.

This was followed by a vote on the ordinance itself. The result was a 5-1 vote in favor of passage. Horn accompanied his negative with an explanation.

He said he could not bring himself to "yes" to an ordinance appropriating city funds for playground use when there were other things the city needed. He pointed out that the city's system of sewers should be repaired before money is appropriated for other uses.

"IF THE FELLOWS out at the park would just get a few things going on out there, they could collect a little money themselves," he declared.

The ordinance was declared lost by President of Council Luther Bower, who said he had been advised by City Solicitor George Gerhardt that a unanimous vote was necessary to pass an ordinance under suspension of rules. Gerhardt was not present at the meeting.

The second ordinance was read. It, too, called for an appropriation of $500. Its purpose was to make it possible for the service department to repair City Hall.

Service Director John Neuding explained to the legislators that the building is in need of roof repairs, a floor replacement on one of the entrances, window repairs, and the cellar fixed up.

"If the appropriation will make it possible to get that filthy corner cleaned up, then it's worth it," said Councilman Ray Anderson. "That downstairs isn't fit for a hog to be in."

Again a vote taken on suspension of rules, and again the result was unanimous approval.

Then the roll was called on passage. Five councilmen voted yes. Adkins came up with his negative, and an explanation to go with it.

HE SAID HE felt it was essential for the city to have adequate playground facilities, and that whenever council would

GOP Awaits New Chief

Gabrielson Tipped As Leading Choice

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3—The Republican national committee is assembling here today to choose a new chairman, with Dewey followers striving to block election of Guy George Gabrielson, New Jersey lawyer and businessman.

Both Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio are staying out of the fight personally. But their followers are staging a major intra-party battle over the chairmanship.

Gabrielson is an outstanding favorite to be elected chairman at tomorrow's session of the national committee. The election follows the resignation of Hugh D. Scott of Pennsylvania.

Scott was Dewey's choice after the New Yorker became the GOP presidential nominee last year. Gabrielson was an ardent Taft supporter at Philadelphia. This explains the battle over his candidacy for the chairmanship.

Ag Officials Claim Dairy Product Prices To Go Up

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3—The government told housewives today that they can expect to pay higher prices for dairy products in the months ahead.

The Agriculture Department made this prediction on the basis of a seasonal drop in production and an advance in price support levels for butter and non-fat dry milk solids.

Dairy farmers have been receiving 59 cents per pound for top grade butter and 57 cents for lower grades.

A support increase which ups all grades three cents a pound has caused an "increased in-storage movement" by dairymen.

The department also noted a sharp upswing in the family use of margarine and lesser use of butter since 1942. About 66 percent of families reported they used butter in 1948 compared with 85 percent in 1942.

ON THE OTHER hand, oleo users jumped from around ten percent to 51 percent during the same period.

As of June, the department said that the retail price of butter had tumbled an average 23 percent within a year.

Dairy products as a group have fallen about 12 percent below their peak reached in August, 1948.

Consumers prices of cheese have slumped 11 percent during the year. This sharp reduction was attributed in part to the dollar shortage in Great Britain.

The department explained that about two-thirds of U. S. cheese exports went to Britain during 1948.

New Zoning Law Provokes Exchange By Councilmen

A question concerning the progress made on preparation of a zoning ordinance for Circleville was raised by Councilman Boyd Horn during Tuesday's night's meeting of council.

the commission's head, which he has the right to do, council has nothing to do with it."

Horn said Adkins didn't understand him. What he wanted to know was why had there been no report on the progress of the zoning plan. He said that members of the commission had promised to submit periodic explanations of the work as it progressed.

Mrs. Lillian Moore and J. O. Eagleson were the only three members present during the session.

LEIST CITED that the board might now purchase a similar plot in the Goeller tract momentarily but that it was waiting until its original selection becomes cleared and the deal is consummated.

The plans considered by the panel Tuesday call for the new building to be situated north and south on the plot, with two classrooms on each side of a hallway which would extend the length of the structure.

One set of the two classrooms, according to the tentative plans, would call for a small platform stage in one end of one room and a movable wall separating the two rooms. Leist said that would permit the classrooms to be converted into a long auditorium for the youngsters within a matter of minutes.

In addition to the classrooms, the specifications presented by Glass included space for a kitchen, foreseeing the possible need for a cafeteria in the future; a storage room; first aid room; office; and a room for the heating plant.

Leist explained that the board will hold off final discussion of the plans until the site is cleared and until more of the members are present.

Tommyguns Used In Daring Raid

Police said they used a stolen car.

THE CHAUFFEUR said that the bandits did not wear masks, just dark sunglasses.

Although seeing a possible link with the Deauville robbery the police also worked on the theory that the men had a hide-out somewhere in the hills above the Mediterranean.

Once the Aga Khan was able to notify police the road blockades were set up from the southern coast to the interior.

The daylight robbery at Deauville yesterday occurred in the swank Van Cleef and Arpels jewelry store when black-masked men, also carrying Tommyguns and machineguns, made off with diamonds and necklaces valued at about $310,000.

A burst of fire from a machinegun wielded by one of the bandits wearing a fencing mask shattered the window in which costly gems were displayed. A passerby was wounded, and the men escaped in two cars.

British Lord Says Communism Is 'Conspiracy'

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Lord Vansittart, British foreign affairs expert, said today that "Communism is not a party but a conspiracy," and hence strong anti-Communist measures in no way impair Democratic liberties.

The distinguished diplomat and foreign affairs writer declared:

"I sometimes wonder why Americans charge the themselves with hysteria, witch-hunting and all the Communist vocabulary for doing badly what needs doing better."

"Another sad Anglo-Saxon habit is perpetually to rush into sackcloth, which is the worst possible costume for dealing with any totalitarianism, black, brown or red."

"The liberties of true Democrats are in no way impaired by the refusal to license liberty to destroy liberty."

"The English-speaking Democracies have a bad habit of seeing difficulties where they do not exist, and it is just silly to let Communists base themselves on Democracy till they can exterminate it."

Autopsy Due In Death Of Woman, 34

COLUMBUS, Aug. 3.—An autopsy was to be performed today on the body of an attractive 34-year-old Columbus housewife found face-down in four feet of water in Big Walnut creek yesterday afternoon.

A sister-in-law, Mrs. Edith Brown, identified the dead woman last night as Mrs. Marie Ryan, the wife of Benjamin Ryan.

A short time after the body was found, Ryan identified rings worn by his wife which were taken to him by sheriff's deputies.

Dr. Robert A. Evans, Franklin County coroner, said a preliminary examination revealed no marks of violence of the dark-haired woman's body. He said, however, that her pocket book containing a small sum of money was missing.

Mrs. Ryan had been visiting her sister, Mrs. James Ruth, yesterday. She left the home, which is also the Columbus Riding Club, saying she was going to take a bus to Columbus.

But the scene where she was found dead a few hours later is not on the route toward Columbus from the club. Investigators were checking leads to determine why the woman had not flagged a bus directly in front of the riding club.

Nearly $65 million is being meted out by the government to provide healthful lunches for the nation's school children during the next 12 months.

All of the 48 states, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Alaska, the Virgin Islands and the District of Columbia will get a share of the funds.

More than one billion school meals are expected to be served, benefiting one fourth of the country's younger students. An additional $17,250,000 has been earmarked to buy special nutritious foods including orange juice, cheese and peanut butter.

Iranian Scholar Fails In Suicide After Love Tiff

BERKELEY, Cal., Aug. 3.—Fiery Parviz Daryoush, wealthy Iranian student who shot and wounded a married coed because she wanted to leave him and return to her husband, tried to kill himself in Berkeley's city prison last night.

The 27-year-old University of California graduate scholar attempted suicide by hanging as the victim of his romantic ardor, comely Mrs. Judith Korb Sher, lay in a hospital with a bullet in her brain and only a 50-50 chance to live.

Daryoush declared he did not want a lawyer because he wants justice "to work its own way." At the same time he blamed society for his impulsive attack on Mrs. Sher. He exclaimed:

"You fill young people with gas, then hold them close to a flame, and wonder why they explode!"

He described this "gas" as the many frustrations in life resulting from "the morass of deliberate, oppressive conventions and stupid traditions."

Meanwhile, the woman's husband, Samuel A. Sher, 26, said he and his wife "are still in love."

The Shers, both students at the university, decided to take a vacation together after they and Daryoush had met in a Berkeley cafe to discuss the triangle.

Daryoush shot the attractive coed while she was packing clothing into her car for the trip.

Weather Here Is Average, So Says Observer

Average August weather prevailed through Ohio Wednesday with a variable pattern of clouds overhead.

The U. S. Weather Bureau predicted light, scattered showers for most of the state Wednesday afternoon and evening.

Forecasters said temperatures would range between 80 and 85 degrees with a low of about 60 expected Wednesday night.

"Those points which have some cloud cover," observers continued, "will have somewhat lower temperatures than those enjoying sunny skies."

"For instance, Dayton had 69 Wednesday morning because of clouds while Columbus had 75 at the same time."

Observers said the cool air mass which moved into the state was not much cooler than the air already prevailing in the state, thereby holding up most of the predicted thundershowers of late Tuesday and Wednesday.

The forecaster added that present conditions will hold through Friday, with decreasing cloudiness.

Korea, China Chiefs To Meet

SEOUL, Aug. 3.—South Korea's president, Syngman Rhee, flew today to the Chinhae naval base to await arrival of Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek for a conference on creation of an anti-Communist Pacific alliance.

Chiang is expected to arrive at the port on Korea's southern coast within the next two days for the meeting, viewed as the second major step toward formation of a Pacific union against Red aggression.

A preliminary Red Cross course in swimming instructions will begin in Gold Cliff Park at 6 p. m. Thursday.

Mrs. Jacob Smallwood, secretary of the Pickaway County Red Cross Chapter, said the preliminary course is part of a long range plan suggested to furnish competent swimming instructors here next Summer.

Mrs. Smallwood pointed out that the preliminary instruction will be held from 6 p. m. until 9 p. m. for five sessions. The course is to be supervised by Jean Heine and Joe Bell, both of Circleville.

Beginning Aug. 22, approximately 25 local swimmers are expected to enroll in an intensive swimming instructor's course. Gerald Kelly of Alexandria, Va., is to give the final phase of the program, she said.

MRS. SMALLWOOD said the final course will be held in Lancaster for the first three nights, while the classes will be held at Gold Cliff for the remaining two nights.

She explained that the classes will be open to anyone over 19-years-old who has attained his advanced water safety certificate. The preliminary course is required before the student may enroll in the final instructor classes.

Mrs. Smallwood explained that the local chapter had planned to give mass swimming instructions this Summer, but that competent instructors are unavailable. The new program will provide enough experts to put on the program next Summer.

The secretary added that transportation will be provided by the chapter and that no costs are entailed in the course.

Grandma, 98, Likes Her Pipe

CINCINNATI, Aug. 3.—On the eve of her 99th birthday, Grandma Rhoades credited her long life in Cincinnati today to 94 years of uninterrupted pipe smoking.

"If you want to get rid of me," she said, "just take my pipe away."

Grandma Rhoades, who lives on Cincinnati's north side, was born in the middle of the last century as the first signs of an impending war between the states appeared. She had 14 children, six of whom are still alive.

DEATHS and Funerals

MAYNARD WEILER

Maynard William Weiler, 29, of Wayne Township, died at 5:15 a. m. Wednesday in White Cross hospital, Columbus, following a short illness.

He was born Nov. 11, 1919, in Wayne Township, son of Leslie and Dollie Hinton Weiler.

Surviving him, in addition to his parents, are his widow, Maxine Ellis Weiler; three children, Judith Ann, Nancy Ellen and Gerald Maynard; two sisters, Miss Joan Weiler, at home, and Mrs. Benny Metzger of Williamsport Route 2; a grandfather, William Weiler of Wayne Township; and a great grandfather, Frank Ebenhack of Wayne Township.

He was a member of Springbank Methodist church in Yellowbush. The body has been removed to Defenbaugh Funeral Home pending arrangements.

INFANT FRANCIS

Theodore Phillip Francis, 11-day-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Francis of Jackson Township, died at 5 a. m. Wednesday in Children's hospital, Columbus.

The baby was born in Jackson Township July 23. In addition to his parents, he is survived by two brothers, George Melvin and Richard Eugene; four sisters, Hilda Louise, Shirley Elizabeth, Clara Marvine and Thelma Patricia; his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Starkey of Jackson Township; his paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Francis of Columbus; and great grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Seymour of West Mill street.

The body has been removed to Defenbaugh Funeral Home pending arrangements.

INFANT HERRIDGE

Information has been received that Linda Sue Herridge, 20-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Herridge of Sparland, Ill., was killed by a truck near her home.

The report said the youngster was killed July 21 when a bakery truck ran over her as she played in a driveway near her home.

The child was the daughter of the former June Ellen Onyung, who formerly lived here and attended Circleville high school.

MRS. W. D. PHILLIPS

Mrs. W. D. Phillips died Tuesday evening in the home of her son, Dr. G. D. Phillips of 624 Beverly Road, following a long illness. She was the widow of W. D. Phillips, who died April 28.

She is survived by her son and a grandson, Robert Phillips. Private funeral services will be held in Trimble at 2:30 p. m. Thursday. Burial will be in Union street cemetery, Athens.

ROBERTA HOFFMAN

A list of survivors of Roberta Hoffman who died in Columbus Monday was incorrectly stated in The Circleville Herald Tuesday. Mrs. Hoffman is survived by three sisters, Mrs. George Binkley and Mrs. Ora Gailday of Columbus, and Mrs. Frank Rader of Circleville.

Localite's Car In Amanda Crash

A Circleville Route 3 man's car was badly damaged in an accident near Amanda last weekend.

According to reports, Eugene Sniff, 21, had been driving on Route 22 about a half mile east of Amanda at the time of the mishap, when another auto, driven by Virgil Acord of Chillicothe, crossed over the centerline and smashed into his car.

Acord was treated in Lancaster hospital for a head laceration following the crash. Later Acord was fined $10 and costs in the court of Mayor Fred VonStein for driving left of the highway centerline.

agree to appropriate $500 for the playground, he would vote favorably for repairs to the city building.

President Bower declared the ordinance lost.

At this point Councilman Ray Cook declared:

"I've been here a long time and if these two ordinances are lost on a 5-1 vote, then two-thirds the ordinances passed here in the last five years are illegal."

He urged Council President Bower to challenge the ruling that a unanimous vote was required to pass the bills by declaring them passed.

He said it had always been the rule that a two-thirds vote was sufficient to pass an ordinance after rules had been suspended unanimously. He added:

"Let's get this thing straightened out. As chairman of council, you should rule that these ordinances be passed. The city solicitor said the information came from the state attorney general. Well, next time the attorney general is consulted, let the whole council go. Five votes is enough for passage."

Other councilmen sided with Cook. Said President Bower:

"Gentlemen, I did not declare these ordinances lost through any desire of my own. I was advised by the city solicitor that a unanimous vote was required."

He said that if council so desired he would declare the ordinances passed, and instructed Council Clerk Fred Nicholas to make the necessary entry in the minutes.

"OBEDIENCE to law is a requirement of liberty, but it sometimes means tyranny, too," Cook observed.

A third $500 appropriation ordinance was passed without dissent under suspension of rules. It calls for transfer of the sum from the general fund to the department of public service fund for payment of the city engineer's salary.

Change In Will To Give $1,000 To Hospital Here

The will of Mayme S. Roper has been probated in Pickaway County probate court. A codicil to the will revokes a $1,000 bequest to English Lutheran church of Zanesville.

Under the terms of the document the City of Circleville is to receive $500, the money to be used solely for improvements or to purchase equipment required or necessary for Berger hospital.

Other beneficiaries named in the will are James Kappes of Zanesville, $2,000; Mrs. Florence Hess of Zanesville, $1,000; Mrs. Florence Roper Voss, Margaret Roper, and Effie Roper each to get $500; half share in real estate in Zanesville each to Georgia Schmidt and Eli S. Roper, surviving spouse.

The balance and residue of the property is left to the husband and during his natural life, and at his death to be placed in a trust fund and turned over to Ruth Kappes when she becomes 21 years old.

Lad Gets Extra Long Sleep

OMAHA, Aug. 3.—Seven-year-old Travis Wissenburg, who accidentally swallowed 23 sleeping pills Monday, was awake today.

Doctors, who had termed his case "hopeless," used every remedy known to medical science to keep the boy alive, though he slumbered in a deep, drugged sleep for nearly two days.

doesn't go too far and that replenishing has already begun."

The former lieutenant governor of Ohio reported that in June national personal income was running at an annual rate of $212 billion, $3 billion higher than for the same month a year ago.

"There are $200 billion currently in liquid savings," he said. Businessmen should not "pull in their horns," he continued, because "public confidence is the really important thing."

Meanwhile, in Washington Sawyer's Commerce Department reported that unemployment in the United States reached the highest level in seven years last month when a 4,095,000 persons were jobless.

At the same time, total employment in the nation reached a 1949 peak of 59,720,000. This was an increase of 101,000 over June figures, but 1,895,000 below the level of July, 1948.

Texas Eastern Starts Repair Of Roads Here

Texas Eastern Pipe Line Corporation has started repairing Pickaway County roads at points where they were torn up to permit laying of the pipe.

Pickaway County Engineer Henry T. McCrady said 15 roads will be repaired by the company. The repairs are to include a four inch layer of black top.

Roads crossed by the line are Yankeetown Road, Williamsport-Era-Road, Darbyville-Willamport Road, Circleville-London Northern Road, Circleville-Darbyville Road, Florence Chapel Road, Turney Caldwell Road, Circleville-Commercial Point Road, Circleville-Ashville Road, Circleville-Lockbourne Eastern Road, Circleville-Groveport Road, South Bloomfield Road, Circleville-Winchester Road, Etnoecher Road, and East Ringgold Northern Road.

Ashville Men Lease Packing Plant Here

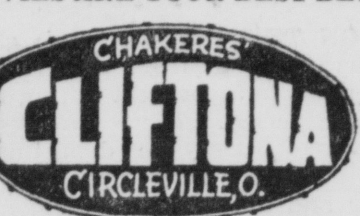

The H and L Packing Company of Lovers Lane, owned by Harold T. Pontius, et al, has been leased to L. B. Dailey and Dewey Donaldson, both of Ashville.

Donaldson said the frozen food locker, butcher shop, and grocery store will be maintained as before, with a full line of groceries and meats available to the public.

A custom butcher with 20 years experience, Donaldson said he will now butcher for retail trade as well. He said his partner, Dailey, will handle groceries and help with the butchering. Dailey operates a grocery store in Mt. Sterling.

Spangler Lass Is City's First August Baby

Mr. and Mrs. Walton Spangler of 201 East Franklin street are the parents of Circleville's first August baby.

The new arrival is a daughter, the first youngster in the Spangler family, and was born at 12:45 a. m. Wednesday in Berger hospital. The baby weighed eight pounds, 12 ounces at birth, according to Dr. V. D. Kerns, attending.

As the first August-born the new Miss Spangler will receive the following tributes from Circleville merchants:

A quart of milk daily for two weeks from the Blue Ribbon Dairy;

A $1 purchase in the baby department of the G. C. Murphy Co.;

One carton of lamp bulbs from the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co.;

A $1 savings account in the baby's name in the Circleville Savings and Banking Co.;

A baby blanket from the C. J. Schneider Furniture store; and

A free three-month's subscription to The Circleville Herald.

The parents of the first August baby may obtain a gift certificate entitling them to the above gifts by visiting the offices of The Herald.

Mr. Spangler is an employee of the local Ohio Unemployment Compensation office.

Mrs. Jacob Smallwood, secretary of the Pickaway County Red Cross Chapter, said the preliminary course is part of a long range plan suggested to furnish competent swimming instructors here next summer.

Mrs. Smallwood pointed out that the preliminary instruction will be held from 6 p. m. until 9 p. m. for five sessions. The course is to be supervised by Jean Heine and Joe Bell, both of Circleville.

Beginning Aug. 22, approximately 25 local swimmers are expected to enroll in an intensive swimming instructor's course. Gerald Kelly of Alexandria, Va., is to give the final phase of the program, she said.

MRS. SMALLWOOD said the final course will be held in Lancaster for the first three nights, while the classes will be held at Gold Cliff for the remaining two nights.

She explained that the classes will be open to anyone over 19-years-old who has attained his advanced water safety certificate. The preliminary course is required before the student may enroll in the final instructor classes.

Mrs. Smallwood explained that the local chapter had planned to give mass swimming instructions this summer, but that competent instructors are unavailable. The new program will provide enough experts to put on the program next summer.

The secretary added that transportation will be provided by the chapter and that no costs are entailed in the course.

Grandma, 98, Likes Her Pipe

CINCINNATI, Aug. 3.—On the eve of her 99th birthday, Grandma Rhoades credited her long life in Cincinnati today to 94 years of uninterrupted pipe smoking.

"If you want to get rid of me," she said, "just take my pipe away."

Grandma Rhoades, who lives on Cincinnati's north side, was born in the middle of the last century as the first signs of an impending war between the states appeared. She had 14 children, six of whom are still alive.

DEATHS and Funerals

MAYNARD WEILER

Maynard William Weiler, 29, of Wayne Township, died at 5:15 a. m. Wednesday in White Cross hospital, Columbus, following a short illness.

He was born Nov. 11, 1919, in Wayne Township, son of Leslie and Dolle Hinton Weiler.

Surviving him, in addition to his parents, are his widow, Maxine Ellis Weiler; three children, Judith Ann, Nancy Ellen and Gerald Maynard; two sisters, Miss Joan Weiler, at home, and Mrs. Benny Metzger of Williamsport Route 2; a grandfather, William Weiler of Wayne Township; and a great grandfather, Frank Ebenhack of Wayne Township.

He was a member of Springbrook Methodist church in Yellowbud. The body has been removed to Defenbaugh Funeral Home pending arrangements.

INFANT FRANCIS

Theodore Phillip Francis, 11-day-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Francis of Jackson Township, died at 5 a. m. Wednesday in Children's hospital, Columbus.

The baby was born in Jackson Township July 23. In addition to his parents, he is survived by two brothers, George Melvin and Richard Eugene; four sisters, Hilda Louise, Shirley Elizabeth, Clara Marvina and Thelma Patricia; his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Starkey of Jackson Township; his paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Francis of Columbus; and great grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Seymour of West Mill street.

The body has been removed to Defenbaugh Funeral Home pending arrangements.

INFANT HERRIDGE

Information has been received that Linda Sue Herridge, 20-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Herridge of Sparland, Ill., was killed by a truck near her home.

The report said the youngster was killed July 21 when a bakery truck ran over her as she played in a driveway near her home.

The child was the daughter of the former June Ellen Onyun, who formerly lived here and attended Circleville high school.

MRS. W. D. PHILLIPS

Mrs. W. D. Phillips died Tuesday evening in the home of her son, Dr. G. D. Phillips of 624 Beverly Road, following a long illness. She was the widow of W. D. Phillips, who died April 28.

She is survived by her son and a grandson, Robert Phillips. Private funeral services will be held in Trimble at 2:30 p. m. Thursday. Burial will be in Union street cemetery, Athens.

ROBERTA HOFFMAN

A list of survivors of Roberta Moffitt Hoffman who died in Columbus Monday was incorrectly stated in The Circleville Herald Tuesday. Mrs. Hoffman is survived by three sisters, Mrs. George Binkley and Mrs. Ora Gailday of Columbus, and Mrs. Frank Rader of Circleville.

Localite's Car In Amanda Crash

A Circleville Route 3 man's car was badly damaged in an accident near Amanda last weekend.

According to reports, Eugene Siniff, 21, had been driving on Route 22 about a half mile east of Amanda at the time of the mishap, when another auto, driven by Virgil Acord of Chillicothe, crossed over the centerline and smashed into his car.

Acord was treated in Lancaster hospital for a head laceration following the crash. Later Acord was fined $10 and costs in the court of Mayor Fred Stein for driving left of the highway centerline.

Lad Gets Extra Long Sleep

OMAHA, Aug. 3.—Seven-year-old Trevis Wissenburg, who accidentally swallowed 23 sleeping pills Monday, was awake today.

Doctors, who had termed his case "hopeless," used every remedy known to medical science to keep the boy alive, though he slumbered in a deep, drugged sleep for nearly two days.

Change In Will To Give $1,000 To Hospital Here

The will of Mayme S. Roper has been probated in Pickaway County probate court. A codicil to the will revokes a $1,000 bequest to English Lutheran church of Zanesville.

Under the terms of the document the City of Circleville is to receive $500, the money to be used solely for improvements or to purchase equipment required or necessary for Berger hospital.

Other beneficiaries named in the will are James Kappes of Zanesville, $2,000; Mrs. Florence Hess of Zanesville, $1,000; Mrs. Florence Roper Voss, Margaret Roper, and Effie Roper each to get $500; half share in real estate in Zanesville each to Georgia Schmidt and Eli S. Roper, surviving spouse.

The balance and residue of the property is left to the husband and for during his natural life, and at his death to be placed in a trust fund and turned over to Ruth Kappes when she becomes 21 years old.

Solons Shun Solicitor

(Continued from Page One) agree to appropriate $500 for the playground, he would vote favorably for repairs to the city building.

President Bower declared the ordinance lost.

At this point Councilman Ray Cook declared:

"I've been here a long time and if these two ordinances are lost on a 5-1 vote, then two-thirds the ordinances passed here in the last five years are illegal."

He urged Council President Bower to challenge the ruling that a unanimous vote was required to pass the bills by declaring them passed.

He said it had always been the rule that a two-thirds vote was sufficient to pass an ordinance after rules had been suspended unanimously. He added:

"Let's get this thing straightened out. As chairman of council, you should rule that these ordinances be passed. The city solicitor said the information came from the state attorney general. Well, next time the attorney general is consulted, let the whole council go. Five votes is enough for passage."

Other councilmen sided with Cook. Said President Bower:

"Gentlemen, I did not declare these ordinances lost through any desire of my own. I was advised by the city solicitor that a unanimous vote was required."

He said that if council so desired he would declare the ordinances passed, and instructed Council Clerk Fred Nicholas to make the necessary entry in the minutes.

"OBEDIENCE to law is a requirement of liberty, but it sometimes means tyranny, too," Cook observed.

A third $500 appropriation ordinance was passed without dissent under suspension of rules. It calls for transfer of the sum from the general fund to the department of public service fund for payment of the city engineer's salary.

Ashville Men Lease Packing Plant Here

The H and L Packing Company of Lovers Lane, owned by Harold T. Pontius, et al, has been leased to L. B. Dailey and Dewey Donaldson, both of Ashville.

Donaldson said the frozen food locker, butcher shop, and grocery store will be maintained as before, with a full line of groceries and meats available to the public.

A custom butcher with 20 years experience, Donaldson said he will now butcher for retail trade as well. He said his partner, Dailey, will handle groceries and help with the butchering. Dailey operates a grocery store in Mt. Sterling.

WASHINGTON REPORT

By SENATOR ROBERT A. TAFT

Whether for or against military aid to Europe, anyone interested in sound government ought to be shocked at the terms of President Truman's bill designed to arm the world against Russia. It proposes to give him unlimited authority to give arms to any government in the world which he wishes to strengthen. It is not confined to Atlantic Pact countries.

The new bill gives away any government property if he says it is surplus and since no appropriations are necessary, this power seems to be without limit.

It even includes naval vessels. It is not clear whether even atom bombs are excepted from the President's give-away powers.

The bill proposes cash authorization for $1,450,000,000 but it admits that another half billion of material may be given away without appropriation.

THINK OF THE tremendous power which this proposal gives the President to involve us in any war throughout the world, including civil wars where we may favor one faction against another! No individual ought to have such power, certainly not Mr. Truman or his Secretary of State.

I am opposed to the whole idea of giving the President power to arm the world against Russia or anyone else, or even to arm Western Europe, except where there is a real threat of aggression.

We are stimulating an armament race. We are trying to restore a military balance of power on the European continent. Such policies in the past have always led to war rather than to peace.

Furthermore, as a deterrent to war, the plan seems to me most ineffective. It is said that at least 60 Divisions are necessary to enable Western Europe to defend itself against Russia, and the cost of modern divisions of that type would be at least $20 billion. Russia has been deterred from military aggression by the strength of the American armed forces and particularly by our air force with its atomic bombs. The Russians are not going to be any more deterred by the transfer of a lot of obsolete equipment and a small fraction of the aid necessary for really effective armies in Western Europe.

WE ARE PROPOSING to give these arms to a dozen different countries. Of course after each country gets its share we have no control, and we don't know how they may be used. The governments may turn Communist or Fascist. They may aid Russia instead of fighting against it. Russia may capture the arms before we get there.

We are already giving Europe $5 billion a year to rebuild her economic strength. And as the State Department admits: "Military strength cannot be effective or lasting unless it rests on the foundations of economic health and stability."

Just as the economic health of Europe is essential in the battle against communism, so, in particular, is sound prosperity in the U. S.

Facing a deficit of $3-$5 billion next year, should we start now on a vast new spending project which may extend itself to the Near East, the Far East and to South America? The limits to the cost of this militarism cannot be foreseen.

In general, I feel that if we have the money to spend, which we do not, it is more effective as a deterrent to war if we strengthen our own American military forces. I would favor sending arms to a country when it can be shown that the country is really threatened by Russian military aggression. On the basis of this conviction I voted for military assistance to Greece and Turkey, and I would vote for like aid to China.

But the scatter-gun blankcheck approach of arming anybody in the world of whom the President may approve seems to me the best calculated method of producing a bankrupt American economy and the tragedy of a third world war.

WISDOM ON THE WING
THE NAVY and the Civil Aeronautics Board should be unrelenting in their joint and separate inquiries into the recent mid-air collision of a commercial passenger plane and a stunting Navy plane.
For one thing the nation has been shocked by the stupidity and needlessness of the accident, which cost sixteen lives. And this was by no means the first tragic accident which has been caused by show-off aerial acrobatics at times and places when they were utterly out of place and inexcusable.
For another thing, private citizens who take an interest in the state of their nation's defenses are startled by the faulty discipline revealed when military aircraft are involved in incidents of this kind. Military fliers have standing orders not to engage in acrobatics which will endanger private or commercial craft, or people or property on the ground. Spectacular violations of those orders are not merely the antics of some uninhibited young pilot; they are evidence of the failure of responsible officers to exercise appropriate judgment and effective control over their commands.
The people will want to know that the investigation of this accident is being pushed to a fruitful conclusion. And they will want to know that effective measures are being adopted to bring about better future control of aircraft in flight.

STRONG FOUNDATION
AFTER intensive study and observation, an American newspaper man, Spencer D. Irwin, has come to the conclusion that the strength of the new nation Israel lies in the fact that it has an idealistic basis.
A former instructor in economics at the University of Chicago, who when interviewed was engaged in pulling up floors in old houses in the Negeb to get lumber for new buildings, tried to formulate his reasons for being there. "This land is mine," he quoted, emphasizing his feeling of belonging. Material benefits did not matter so much, he insisted, as the freedom to fight and live for an idea.
The founders of this new nation were assured that its creation was impossible. Only by refusal to admit defeat, and by sheer strength of spirit, were they able to endure and to achieve their goal. The battle could not have been won by a godless people. Israel is a shining example of the fact that spiritual forces do triumph in the end over any and all obstacles.

The British attack on the Morgenthau Plan is late. Also Winston Churchill's contention that he had to accept the Morgenthau Plan because Roosevelt wanted it, also is late and lame. Churchill seems to explain all is errors of historical judgment on the ground that he was dependent, as his country was, upon the bounty of Roosevelt and had to go along with him no matter how well he knew that Roosevelt was wrecking the world. It is too late to say that, in private or in public.
On March 27, 1947, I wrote:
"It is obvious that it (the Morgenthau Plan) was not a design for permanent peace, nor was it in harmony with the Atlantic Charter, nor did it serve the United States. It was a proposal for a Carthaginian peace in the interest of Soviet Russia. In his 'program to prevent Germany from starting World War III,' Morgenthau proposes 'the total destruction of the whole German armament industry, and'—and this is the gist of it—'the removal or destruction of other key industries which are basic to military strength.' Our own experience in the last war proves that this means all industry."

Today the destroyed German industry would be invaluable to us both as a peace-time productive and potential war agency. A good part of the money that the American taxpayer is pouring into the Marshall Plan might have been saved were we able to utilize more effectively the German industrial base.
The Economic Cooperation Administration reports on this subject:
"Prewar Germany was the most powerful industrial country in Europe. Germany's industrial pre-eminence was based principally upon the skills of her population rather than upon her natural resources, although she ranked first in the world in the production of brown coal, second in the production of steel and electric power and third in the output of 'hard coal'."

"Following the surrender in May 1945, the German economy was in a state of almost complete collapse, due not so much to the physical destruction during the war as to the complete disorganization of economic life and of political institutions. Industrial production was at a virtual standstill."
It was at the moment of Potsdam that the United States should have realized that unless Germany's industrial base could quickly and efficiently be restored, this country would be loaded down with the cost not only of supplying Germany but also those countries in Europe which had become dependent upon Germany for manufactured goods.

Two factors stood in the way of a rational approach to the problem: One was the Morgenthau Plan to which Roosevelt and Churchill had agreed at Quebec, without the knowledge of their cabinets; the other was JCS 1067, an order issued by the Joint Chiefs of Staff for the occupation of Germany, based on the Morgenthau Plan. Herbert Hoover, in 1947, said of JCS 1067:

A Very Serious Eye Disorder

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.
NEXT time you are out at night look at the long row of lights down your street and notice if they seem to be wearing halos. If they are, you should report to an eye specialist for an examination, because at times seeing halos around lights is an early symptom of one of the most dread of eye diseases—glaucoma.
In glaucoma there is a disturbance between the production of fluid within the eye and its absorption or removal, with the result that the excess fluid remains in the eyeball to exert disastrous pressure on the delicate structures of the eye.
There are many forms of this disorder, the most serious being the acute-congestive type. Its onset is dramatic, with sudden loss of sight, agonizing pain and, sometimes, vomiting. Usually, the victim has no warning, though in some instances the acute attack may have been preceded by mild pain and the seeing of halos around lights.
Prompt Treatment
If sight is to be saved treatment must be prompt, because the eyeball may be damaged beyond repair unless the pressure can be reduced within 48 hours. However, the outlook for saving sight is good if the pressure is relieved quickly.
As a rule the use of a substance known as a miotic, which contracts the pupil, will be tried first. The one most commonly prescribed is called eserine. If this does not succeed, surgery is necessary.
In this type of glaucoma, only one eye is affected at first, though there is a tendency for the other to become involved later on. On examination the eyelid is often found to be swollen and there is some congestion of the lining membrane over the eyeball. The front part of the eyeball or cornea is cloudy, and the pupil, which is the opening into the eye, is enlarged.
The chronic type of glaucoma is one of the most insidious of diseases. It creeps on its victims slowly and is likely to be neglected because it causes no pain. The seeing of halos around lights is almost the only early sign likely to be observed and hence it is of great importance that anyone who notices this symptom get an eye examination at once.
The most common type of glaucoma is called chronic simple glaucoma. This type occurs slightly more often in women than men, and generally after forty years of age. It differs from the acute glaucoma in that there is no pain. In many instances both eyes are affected. One of the early signs is seeing halos around lights. The condition interferes with the eyesight.
Chronic simple glaucoma often can be kept under control by the use of miotics early in the course of the disease. If the pressure in the eyeball cannot be controlled in this way or there is a gradual loss of vision, operation is required.

IN ONE WAY, AT LEAST, he proved himself right. He left Nick's a few years ago and started his own night club down in the Village under the name Eddie Condon's.
He surrounded himself with his Dixieland musicians and they played the old, gutsy music in their customary energetic style, which, while not exactly on the same shelf with Armstrong's and Hines', was of considerably higher stature than, say, Vaughan Monroe's.
The place caught on. Debutantes and men about town began dropping in there, and since they are the kind of people who have the kind of money to keep that kind of joint open, Eddie Condon's prospered.
A great many of them, true, are a little bewildered by the music—for which you must acquire a taste, like pot cheese—but because it is the place to go, they go.
Now, Mr. Condon is on television and he has his club operating full blast and he is recovering from surgery. He could ask for little more—but we can ask one thing of him. For years, one school of thought has claimed that Eddie's reluctance to take guitar solos when playing with his ensemble is merely a cover-up for the cold fact that the strings in his git-box are rubber and do not make any sound. So we ask, say it isn't so, Slick.

CHAPTER FORTY-FIVE
BEN LEANED forward to draw Kit's attention from the three-cornered conversation. "I am sorry, my dear, not to be more enthusiastic about this idea of yours, but I want a natural, well-balanced life for you."
"Which is?" Furse asked.
"Why, marriage, to be sure."
"It is a satisfying life," said Fanny. "But, Ben, on an occasion like this, there are a hundred other exciting things to come first."
"I don't mean that you elope tonight," said Ben touchily. "But it's something to look ahead to—a honeymoon abroad, a house of your own."
"And a summer place on the North Shore," Kit finished for him. They all laughed goodnaturedly.
"Will you dance, Kit?" asked Furse, grateful for the encore that made a break.
Kit was so happy that for a moment she could not speak. "Are you as happy as I am?" she asked as they moved into the circle of dancers.
"I wouldn't have missed this for anything in the world," he smiled down at her, evading a direct answer. Happy? He was hardly that. He had too strong a feeling that he did not belong here. What was he supposed to be guilty of? If Marvell had any idea of what his passivity cost... "When do you go down to New York, Kit?" he asked abruptly.
"In the fall—if I go. Must I go, Furse?"
"I don't know, Kit." It's because I think Marvell is right that makes it so hard—she should have her chance now he thought heavily.
"We'll have the summer, won't we? You promised last spring that after I'd finished Holly, we'd have the summer."
He had promised because, then, it had seemed so far off.
"You want to see me, don't you?"
"Don't ask me any questions, Kit. I have no answers. Marvell will tell you."
"Forgive him about the roses." "That doesn't matter." He took Marvell's side, instantly. "Listen to him, though. He's usually right. I know. Don't listen to other people, to lovers, ambitious friends, stage managers..." he tried to laugh. "I mean what I say. Then you'll get your reward."
The words of her last speech came back to her. Mr. Rochester, if I ever did a good deed in my life—if ever I thought a good thought—if ever I prayed a sincere and blameless prayer—if ever I wished a righteous wish, I am rewarded now. To be your wife is, for me, to be as happy as I can be on earth. Those stiff hammerlike phrases that only the conviction of love made plausible. Oh, God, I do so want him to be happy. He'd let go... "Is everything all right with you?"
"Fair."
"You won't let me any closer, will you?"
"No." His voice was urgent now. "Kit, be fair. Let Marvell have his chance—not only tonight, but more. It means everything to him and it must to you. We'll have the rest together..." If he could only stall for time.
"It's all right, Andrew. Forgive me." She slipped her hand from his as the dance ended.
When she came up to the table she saw they had all changed places. Marvell and Ben were sitting together. Nancy was next to Aunt

Fanny diverting her with personal information. "My mother wants me to come to Paris to meet her new husband. I like that, I know Paris awfully well. You see, I always meet my stepfathers there—at the Ritz."
Kit sat down next to Ben. For a moment, in spite of Andrew's stubbornness, she felt deeply at peace. Here were those she had known and loved and who knew and loved her. Nothing was changed—yet. It will never be like this again, she thought, as if she were already looking on the past. Marvell and Ben were talking about Uncle Proctor. She half-listened, her eyes on Furse.
"You ought to see Proctor's boy, Bradford. Chubby little fellow; you'd like him."
"Why?" asked Marvell.
"Well—ah, he's like Emily," Ben replied lamely.
"Good. I always admired Emily. She was as comfortable a woman to get on with as I ever knew. All the more marked because Proctor was so uncomfortable. You know that, Ben."
"He was reticent," Marvell smirked but Ben ignored him. "You know, I've thought lately that he's probably never been really well. And then there was Elizabeth," he lowered his voice, "too young altogether. Nowadays, children are fortified from the beginning—nerves, glands."
"Humors—let's put it down to that," said Marvell. "I drink to his good health, then. As a matter of fact, I'd like to see him once again."
"Call on him," said Ben curtly. "You think he'd let me in?"
"I daresay."
"Because he's safe at last! Just as I am—what a dull meeting that would be."
"Safe?" Ben was puzzled.
Behave, Marvell whispered to himself. He signaled to the waiter who was serving the dessert. "Will you ask the orchestra to play us a waltz? An old waltz." He got up and walked to Kit's side. "Now it's our turn."
"I've been waiting all evening," she said charmingly.
They hesitated on the edge of the gloaming carpet. The music rose and fell with violins in the simple measure of an old remembered waltz. Kit's lips were parted, her eyes dark and far-seeing. Suddenly Marvell was apprehensive. What did she see? If only he was sure what was going to happen to her! Then the moment broke like a bubble and they moved across the empty circle of the floor.
The trunk had come, it stood in the study, a dark-green wardrobe with brass trimmings. It was too bulky for the narrow stairs, front or back, and Kit would have to pack it where it stood, Marvell decided. He had ordered it as a surprise and when he called Kit in, she cried in dismay, "So soon?"
"Soon! Here it is September; you'll be leaving in about ten days. It's handsome, isn't it?" He admired it from all sides. "It has a real personality. Tell you what, Kit, after you've packed, just before we close it up, I'll take a picture of you draped around it and then later we'll take another picture when you're unpacking it some swell dressing room 'before' and 'after,' what do you say?"
She put her arms around him, laid her cheek against his. He took it for thanks but she was trying to tell him something. Managing a small smile, she drew back. It was just as useless as it had been all summer. For what could she say as long as Andrew forbade her to speak? Forbade? What was it, if not that—his unwillingness to change the course Marvell set for her? All through the summer she had willed herself to believe that all was well, that the lovely season was an island anchored in the narrow river of passing time where she was secure. But as the days grew shorter, the hours rose like water to her refuge and she felt the panic of being trapped.

"We'll take the drawers out and carry 'em upstairs," Marvell said, watching her rub her fingers over the brass nailheads.
"But we haven't decided about the school and a place to live!" she protested.
"Of course we have! The Academy and that girls' club. I'm going in with you as far as Boston. Then you're on your own." The sooner he checked any homesickness, the better.
When Marvell came back from the shop in the late afternoon, the house was empty but for Mrs. Crans preparing supper in the kitchen. He and the trunk shared the study in companionable silence.
"By golly, if I am excited as this, how must she feel?" He went to the toddy closet and got out a bottle of whiskey. He lit the fire in the big hearth, for the evenings were cool now. He sat in his favorite wing chair and poured himself a double measure. He raised his glass to the shining hulk before him. The brass lock winked at him. He chuckled. His plans were made. Kit would have the fall in New York while he settled up here—standing accounts, unfinished jobs. He would sell the business outright to Henry or Brewster, but not the house. It would always be a place for Kit to come back to. Then in the spring, he'd go down himself. He was not going to live with her, he would not hang on her steps. He'd look up Doc, still boarding in Brooklyn. He might look for a temporary job, or travel a bit. Visit Nedda? She was running some kind of private charity in England. She had discovered healing powers in her authoritative breast, at last, he mused. Hardly the place for him. But the main thing was to let Kit alone while she was learning. When she was on her feet, he couldn't be any burden. And then, and then... The whiskey tasted warm and smoky. It was a long time since he had enjoyed a solitary drink. To drink when you were feeling good, that was the thing. It blurred the too-sharp edges of anticipation, it extended the well-being of the moment into the next hour. He poured out another drink. There was an old trick of illusion, shared by everybody from infancy to senility, when the mind like an idling motor vibrated with the rhythm and pattern of action, but stood still all the while wasting fuel in day dreams. Today Marvell sprinkled Kit freely with fame, early won, long-lived. I mustn't think I'm responsible for her, he managed to drag himself back to reality, for the most I can do is to turn the switch that will set in motion the chain of cogs and wheels already in place. "Since life's so inevitable," he said aloud, "where do all the shocks come from?"
Then the fire and the drink had their effect upon him and he drifted back to the quick success of dreams. The west wind blew through the trees outside the window and sounded to him like far away, prolonged applause.

ONE MAN'S OPINION
The selection of Dean Acheson as the Best Male Ballroom Dancer Of The Year can be used to encourage or frighten our dancing children.
It all depends on how you say, "Do you want to grow up and become secretary of state?"
No one knows whether Acheson is a good dancer because he's secretary of state or secretary of state because he's a good dancer.
But it must be admitted that he has waltzed out of a few difficult situations without using his elbows.
And these days it's very important to have a State Department head who knows when to say, "Shall we sit this one out?"
Tom Clark evidently is also a dancer. He was one of the few to recognize the Missouri Waltz in time to claim a prize.

My New York
By MEL HEIMER
EDDIE CONDON
NEW YORK—The big town had a few uneasy moments a couple of weeks ago. The word was out that Edward Condon, Esq., was fighting for his life in one of the city's hospitals—or "one of those sawbones joints" as the great man himself would put it—and pretty nearly everybody held their breath. However, after a couple of days, the chart on the end of his bed began looking considerably less zaggy and somewhat more ziggy and it wasn't long before the great man was sitting up and calling for his customary quota of warm ale, which is what he drinks when he's on the wagon.
By this time, Eddie Condon is just about accepted as one of New York's landmarks. He is a saloon owner and a guitar player, a remarkable combination because there rarely is a tavern proprietor who has any feeling for the higher things in life and, paradoxically, rarely is there a musician who has any feeling for a dollar.
A real musician, I mean. Crooners and piano-playing band-leaders who put on funny hats, or, like Vaughan Monroe, football suits, are always reasonably sure of which side their bread is buttered on. But to men who play music with guts, as jazz musicians have labeled it somewhat indelicately, a bank is just a place to come when you want to use ink and a blotter.
A little over 25 years ago, give or take a few, Eddie began adult life as a banjo player with a bunch of fellow students from Chicago's Austin high school. He has detailed some of the more pertinent facts about that phase of his career, in his autobiography, We Called It Music, but actually it seems to have been a period lived in a haze of alcohol and hot jazz.
Musicians like Louie Armstrong and Earl Hines were the idols of the Austin high bunch, and they lived a thoroughly disreputable life while following in the footsteps of such as those.
Late hours, bad liquor, no sleep—and always the elusive, inexpressible, wonderfully irritating search for the good music. Men like Gene Krupa, Pee-wee Russell, Benny Goodman and a dozen others, greeting the dawn by blowing up a storm of blues—Tin Roof or Dipper Mouth or Dead Man—in the smoky cellar of a speakeasy.

WISDOM ON THE WING

THE NAVY and the Civil Aeronautics Board should be unrelenting in their joint and separate inquiries into the recent mid-air collision of a commercial passenger plane and a stunting Navy plane.

For one thing the nation has been shocked by the stupidity and needlessness of the accident, which cost sixteen lives. And this was by no means the first tragic accident which has been caused by show-off aerial acrobatics at times and places when they were utterly out of place and inexcusable.

For another thing, private citizens who take an interest in the state of their nation's defenses are startled by the faulty discipline revealed when military aircraft are involved in incidents of this kind. Military fliers have standing orders not to engage in acrobatics which will endanger private or commercial craft, or people or property on the ground. Spectacular violations of those orders are not merely the antics of some uninhibited young pilot; they are evidence of the failure of responsible officers to exercise appropriate judgment and effective control over their commands.

The people will want to know that the investigation of this accident is being pushed to a fruitful conclusion. And they will want to know that effective measures are being adopted to bring about better future control of aircraft in flight.

"Which is?" Furse asked.

"Why, marriage, to be sure."

"It is a satisfying life," said Fanny. "But, Ben, on an occasion like this, there are a hundred other exciting things to come first."

"I don't mean that you elope tonight," said Ben touchily. "But it's something to look ahead to—a honeymoon abroad, a house of your own..."

"And a summer place on the North Shore," Kit finished for him. They all laughed goodnaturedly.

"Will you dance, Kit?" asked Furse, grateful for the encore that made a break.

Kit was so happy that for a moment she could not speak. "Are you as happy as I am?" she asked as they moved into the circle of dancers.

"I wouldn't have missed this for anything in the world," he smiled down at her, evading a direct answer. Happy? He was hardly that. He had too strong a feeling that he did not belong here. What was he supposed to be guilty of? If Marvell had any idea of what his passivity cost... "When do you go down to New York, Kit?" he asked abruptly.

"In the fall—if I go. Must I go, now?"

"I don't know, Kit." It's because I think Marvell is right that makes it so hard—she should have her chance now he thought heavily.

"We'll have the summer, won't we? You promised last spring that after I'd finished Holly, we'd have the summer."

He had promised because, then, it had seemed so far off.

"You want to see me, don't you?"

"Don't ask me any questions, Kit. I have no answers. Marvell will 'I you."

"Forgive him about the roses." "That doesn't matter." He took Marvell's side, instantly. "Listen to him, though. He's usually right. I know. Don't listen to other people, to lovers, ambitious friends, stage managers..." he tried to laugh. "I mean what I say. Then you'll get your reward."

The words of her last speech came back to her. Mr. Rochester, if I ever did a good deed in my life—if ever I thought a good thought—if ever I prayed a sincere and blameless prayer—if ever I wished a righteous wish, I am rewarded now. To be happy, for me, to be as happy as I can be on earth. Those stiff hammerlike phrases that only the conviction of love made plausible. Oh, God, I do so want him to be happy. "He'll let go..." "Is everything all right with you?"

"Fair."

"You won't let me any closer, will you?"

"No." His voice was urgent now. "Kit, be fair. Let Marvell have his chance—not only tonight, but more. It means everything to him and it must to you. We'll have the rest together..." If he could only still for time.

"It's all right, Andrew. Forgive me." She slipped her hand from his as the dance ended.

When she came up to the table she saw they had all changed places. Marvell and Ben were sitting together. Nancy was next to Aunt

Fanny diverting her with personal information. "My mother wants me to come to Paris to meet her new husband. I like that, I know Paris awfully well. You see, I always meet my stepfathers there—at the Ritz."

Kit sat down next to Ben. For a moment, in spite of Andrew's stubbornness, she felt deeply at peace. Here were those she knew and loved and who knew and loved her. Nothing was changed—yet. It will never be like this again, she thought, as if she were already looking on the past. Marvell and Ben were talking about Uncle Proctor. She half-listened, her eyes on Furse.

"You ought to see Proctor's boy, Bradford. Chubby little fellow; you'd like him."

"Why?" asked Marvell.

"Well—ah, he's like Emily," Ben replied lamely.

"Good. I always admired Emily. She was as comfortable a woman to get on with as I ever knew. All the more marked because Proctor was so uncomfortable. You know that, Ben."

"He was reticent," Marvell smiled but Ben ignored him. "You know, I've thought lately that he's probably never been really well. And then there was Elizabeth," he lowered his voice, "too young altogether. Nowadays, children are tormented from the beginning—nerves, glands."

"Humors—let's put it down to that," said Marvell. "I drink to his good health, then. As a matter of fact, I'd like to see him once again."

"Call on him," said Ben curtly. "You think he'd let me in?"

"I daresay."

"Because he's safe at last! Just as I am—what a dull meeting that would be."

"Safe?" Ben was puzzled.

Behave, Marvell whispered to himself. He signaled to the waiter who was serving the dessert. "Will you ask the orchestra to play us a waltz? An old waltz." He got up and walked to Kit's side.

"Now it's our turn."

"I've been waiting all evening," she said charmingly.

They hesitated on the edge of the gleaming parquet. The music rose and fell with violins in the simple measure of an old remembered waltz. Kit's lips were parted, her eyes dark and far-seeing. Suddenly Marvell was apprehensive. What did she see? If only he was sure what was going to happen to her! Then the moment broke like a bubble and they moved across the empty circle of the floor.

The trunk had come, it stood in the study, a dark-green wardrobe with brass trimmings. It was too bulky for the narrow stairs, front or back, and Kit would have to pack it where it stood, Marvell decided. He had ordered it as a surprise and when he called Kit in, she cried in dismay, "So soon?"

"Soon!" Here it is September; you'll be leaving in about ten days. It's handsome, isn't it?" He admired it from all sides. "It has a real personality. Tell you what, Kit, after you've packed, just before we close it up, I'll take a picture of you draped against it and then later we'll take another picture when you're unpacking in some swell dressing room—before and after, what do you say?"

She put her arms around him, laid her cheek against his. He took it for thanks but she was trying to tell him something. Managing a small smile, she drew back together. Nancy was next to Aunt

Marvell's face was lit up. "It was just as useless as it had been all summer. For what could she say as long as Andrew forbade her to speak? Forbade? What was it, if not that—his unwillingness to change the course Marvell set for her? All through the summer she had willed herself to believe that all was well, that the lovely season was an island anchored in the narrow river of passing time where she was secure. But as the days grew shorter, the hours rose like water to destroy her refuge and she felt the panic of being trapped.

"We'll take the drawers out and carry 'em upstairs," Marvell said, watching her rub her fingers over the brass nailheads.

"But we haven't decided about the school and a place to live!" she protested.

"Of course we have! The Academy and that girls' club. I'm going in with you as far as Boston. Then you're on your own." The sooner he checked any homesickness, the better.

When Marvell came back from the sleep in the late afternoon, the house was empty but for Mrs. Crane preparing supper in the kitchen. He and the trunk shared the study in companionable silence.

"Boy golly, if I am excited as this, how must she feel?" He went to the toddy closet and got out a bottle of whiskey. He lit the fire in the big hearth, for the evenings were cool now. He sat in his favorite wing chair and poured himself a double measure. He raised his glass to the coming bulk before him. The brass lock winked at him. He chuckled. His plans were made. Kit would have the fall in New York while he settled up here—outstanding accounts, unfinished jobs. He would sell the business outright to Henry or Brewster, but not the house. It would always be a place for Kit to come back to.

Then in the spring, he'd go down himself. He was not going to live with her, he would not hang on her steps. He'd look up Doc, still boarding in Brooklyn. He might look for a temporary job, or travel a bit. Visit Nedda? She was running some kind of private charity in England. She had discovered healing powers in her authoritative breast, at last, he mused. Hardly the place for him. But the main thing was to let Kit alone while she was learning. When she was on her feet, he couldn't be any burden. And then, and then... The whiskey tasted warm and smoky. It was a long time since he had enjoyed a solitary drink. To drink when you're feeling good, that was the thing. It blurred the too-sharp edges of anticipation, it extended the well-being of the moment into the next hour. He poured out another drink. There was an old trick of illusion, shared by everybody from infancy to senility, when the mind like an idling motor vibrated with the rhythm and pattern of action, but stood still all the while wasting fuel in day dreams. Today Marvell sprinkled Kit freely with facts. To drink when you're feeling good, that was the thing. I mustn't think I'm responsible for her, he managed to drag himself back to reality, for the most I can do is to turn the switch that will set in motion the chain of cogs and wheels already in place. "Since life's so inevitable," he said aloud, "where do all the shocks come from?"

Then the fire and the drink had their effect upon him and he drifted back to the quick success of dreams. The west wind blew through the trees outside the window and sounded to him like far away, prolonged applause.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

Eddie Condon

NEW YORK—The big town had a few uneasy moments a couple of weeks ago. The word was out that Edward Condon, Esq., was fighting for his life in one of the city's hospitals—or "one of those sawbones joints," as the great man himself would put it—and pretty nearly everybody held their breath. However, after a couple of days, the chart on the end of his bed began looking considerably less zaggy and somewhat more ziggy and it wasn't long before the great man was sitting up and calling for his customary quota of warm ale, which is what he drinks when he's on the wagon.

By this time, Eddie Condon is just about accepted as one of New York's landmarks. He is a saloon owner and a guitar player, a remarkable combination because there rarely is a tavern proprietor who has any feeling for the higher things in life and, paradoxically, rarely is there a musician who has any feeling for a dollar.

A real musician, I mean. Crooners and piano-playing band-leaders who put on funny hats, or, like Vaughan Monroe, football suits, are always reasonably sure of which side their bread is buttered on. But to men who play music with guts, as jazz musicians have labeled it somewhat indelicately, a bank is just a place to come when you want to use ink and a blotter.

A little over 25 years ago, give or take a few, Eddie began adult life as a banjo player with a bunch of fellow students from Chicago's Austin high school. He has detailed some of the more pertinent facts about that phase of his career, in his autobiography, We Called It Music, but actually it seems to have been a period lived in a haze of alcohol and hot jazz.

Musicians like Louis Armstrong and Earl Hines were the idols of the Austin high bunch, and they lived a thoroughly disreputable life while following in the footsteps of such as those.

Late hours, bad liquor, no sleep—and always the elusive, inexpressible, wonderfully irritating search for the good music. Men like Gene Krupa, Peeewe Russell, Benny Goodman and a dozen others, greeting the dawn by blowing up a storm of blues—Tin Roof or Dipper Mouth or Dead Man—in the smoky cellar of a speakeasy.

EDDIE TURNED FROM BANJO TO GUITAR somewhere along the line and he first began to achieve a certain pleasant notoriety here in New York during the early Thirties when he led a band in Nick's restaurant on downtown Seventh avenue.

The owner, logically called Nick, used to fire Eddie regularly each week and then hire him back again. It seems that Nick, as Mr. Condon was known to the inner circle, would wander down the street to Julius' saloon for a beer between sets, and forget to come back.

This infuriated Nick, for no reason at all, but Eddie would placate him by letting him sit in when the boys were belting out Dinah or Ida. Nick played very bad, if earnest, piano.

The thing that set Nick apart from his fellow jazzmen was his determination to make the public like his particular kind of jazz, known to the trade as Dixieland. And, likely, to make himself a little money out of it, too.

He began running jazz concerts in Town and Carnegie Halls, he latched on to radio programs and he spread the gospel from the Village to Van Cortlandt Park. I remember sitting with him one afternoon in the kitchen of drummer George Wettling's apartment in midtown and arguing that he was on the wrong track, that he was beating his head against a stone wall.

As an old jazz aficionado, I long have been of the wistful and sad opinion that it is a kind of music without mass appeal. I still think I am dead right, but Eddie shook his head stubbornly, that day in Wettling's kitchen while he had a bottle of beer to his mouth.

IN ONE WAY, AT LEAST, he proved himself right. He left Nick's a few years ago and started his own night club down in the Village under the name Eddie Condon's.

He surrounded himself with his Dixieland musicians and they played the old, gutsy music in their customary energetic style, which, while not exactly on the same shelf with Armstrong's and Hines', was of considerably higher stature than, say, Vaughan Monroe's.

The place caught on. Debutantes and men about town began dropping in there, and since they are the kind of people who have the kind of money to keep that kind of joint open, Eddie Condon's prospered.

A great many of them, true, are a little bewildered by the music—for which you must acquire a taste, like pot cheese—but because it is the place to go, they go.

Now, Mr. Condon is on television and he has his club operating full blast and he is recovering from surgery. He could ask for little more—but we can ask one thing of him. For years, one school of thought has claimed that Eddie's reluctance to take guitar solos when playing with his ensemble is merely a cover-up for the cold fact that the strings in his git-box are rubber and do not make any sound. So we ask, say it isn't so, Slick.

Investiture Rites Held In Ashville Church For Brownie Scout Members

Pins Awarded 9 Youngsters

Hot weather doesn't stop the Ashville Brownies of Troop 12. July was a busy and interesting month for them. At a recent investiture service held in Lutheran church, Mrs. M. E. Noggle, Mrs. Tom Renick and Miss Ruth Stout of the countywide Girl Scout organization were guests as well as the Brownie and Scout mothers.

Standing in horseshoe formation to receive their Brownie pins at the investiture service were:

Barbara Pritchard, Lois Ann Hedges, Linda Toole, Velma Kuhn, Nancy Bainter, Audrey Dummit, Marlene Younklin, Sandra Rife and Donna Jean Koch.

Mrs. Neil Reed, assisted by Mrs. Earl Reed, gave first year Brownie emblems to Carol Reed and Miriam Williams. "A Brownie Smile" was sung by the group.

The newly-organized Girl Scout Troop 16, its leader, Mrs. Everett Peters, and her assistant, Mrs. Elwood Morrison, also took part in the service.

Brownies of Troop 12 were enthusiastic participants in the daily supervised swimming lessons which ended last week. Tuesday the Brownie mothers gave a picnic for the swimmers and the regular meeting followed in the afternoon.

Hereford Field Day Scheduled

Event Is Due Next Monday

The first Pickaway County Hereford Field Day is scheduled to be held next Monday.

The event will be held on the Paul Dillon farm, eight miles northeast of Circleville at the intersection of State Routes 188 and 674.

The Pickaway County Hereford Breeders are sponsoring the event. Many of the breeders will have their cattle at the Field Day.

Dillon will have his herd of 22 Hereford Females available for inspection.

The program will start at 10:30 a. m. with a judging contest for FFA and 4-H Club members.

THERE WILL BE a basket lunch at noon with the association furnishing ice cream and a cold drink.

In the afternoon, L. P. McCann, official of the American Hereford Association, will discuss "Fitting and Showing Beef Animals."

There will be a Showmanship Contest for 4-H and FFA members.

"Sound Farming with Beef Cattle" will be a highlight discussion on the afternoon program.

There will be prizes for the judging and showmanship contests.

Lady Detective Red-Faced After Toledo Incident

TOLEDO, Aug. 3.—Mrs. Herbert McManus of Toledo was somewhat red-faced today, her efforts to play detective thwarted.

While standing in front of her living room window last night, Mrs. McManus saw two men push two women inside a car trunk and drive off in a hurry.

She immediately called her husband, saying there was a kidnapping and that she had the license number of the kidnappers.

"Follow them in your car," she told her husband, "and I'll call the sheriff's office."

The excited woman telephoned the sheriff, who ordered a three-county road blockade by city, county and state police. A short time later, Mrs. McManus made another call to the sheriff's office.

"Herbert got them," she said. "The men pulled into a drive-in theater, bought two tickets and drove inside."

"The two men then unlocked the trunk and the women got out and sat down in the back seat to watch the movie."

Home Ec Teacher Is Hired Here

Circleville board of education Tuesday employed Mrs. Edwin Buck of New Holland Route 1 as its new home economics teacher.

Mrs. Buck is a native of Pickaway County and received her high school training in Scioto Township school. She is to be graduated by Ohio State university with a bachelor of science degree in home economics in September.

Mrs. Buck was employed to fill the post vacated recently by Mrs. Ethel Miller, who resigned after teaching one year, to devote more time to her home life.

Finance Report Pondered, OK'd By City Dads

Circleville's legislators scratched their heads over the financial statement for July submitted by City Auditor Lillian Young.

The parking meter collection was the target selected by Councilman Ray Cook at which to aim a complaint. He pointed out that the April statement, showing a collection of $1,205.50 was more than the $1,051 listed on the current statement.

"Yet there are more autos on the streets now than in April," chimed in Councilman E. L. Montgomery.

The report was accepted, nevertheless, and placed on file. The statement follows:

General fund receipts $2,415.09, expenditures, $7,813.40, balance, $22,039.49; hospital fund receipts, $6,944.34, expenditures, $6,767.74, balance, $3,286.13; water works operating fund receipts, $6,369.94, expenditures, $2,139.94, balance, $7,866.36; sewage disposal fund receipts, $3,809.35, expenditures, $1,220.42, balance, $6,144.75.

AUTO STREET repair fund receipts, $616.01, expenditures, $3,248.89, balance, $1,418.59; gasoline tax fund receipts, $22.45, expenditures, $2,040.92, balance, $2,341.97; police pension receipts, $51.50, expenditures, $110, balance, $4,064.44; firemen pension receipts, $1,054.08, expenditures, $125, balance, $5,139.50. Water works trust fund receipts, $15, expenditures, $15, balance, $695; water works improvement extension fund expenditures, $1,309, balance, $4,270.66. Amusement tax collections for July totaled $263.31.

Berger Control Board At Work, Council Told

Circleville city council was notified Tuesday night that Berger hospital board of governors officially took over control of the institution Aug. 1. Council received the information in a letter from the board.

The legislators were also informed by Councilman Ray Anderson, safety committee member, that the Ohio street crossing has been repaired by the Pennsylvania Railroad Co.

"When will the others be repaired?" asked Councilman Boyd Horn.

"Just be patient," counseled Anderson. "It'll be done."

Council was asked by Clerk Fred Nicholas what it intended to do about a resolution submitted several meetings ago by Circleville Public Library authorities asking council to sanction a merger of the library into a county-wide organization.

Councilman Robert Adkins explained that if the merger were permitted to go through, the library would then be eligible for federal aid and subsidies.

Council decided to wait until the advice of City Solicitor George Gerhardt, absent from Tuesday night's session, could be obtained. The resolution had been referred to him for study.

Elinor Williams' Teen Tips

Miracles do happen. Sloppy, boyish, borrowed-from-brother clothes are a thing of the past for most 'teeners—and that's good news. At a recent meeting of a store's high school fashion council every girl on the fashion board voted for neater, prettier, more feminine clothes.

Their votes went to——Long skirts. They like them as they are now and hope that they won't get shorter next fall.

—Suits with fitted jackets instead of loose, boxy jackets.

—Suits with straight, slim or pleated skirts.

—Dresses with flared skirts, and they like them really full. Other preferences for dresses were wide necklines for dates, high necklines with little collars and fitted bodices.

—Anything so long as it's a T-shirt.

—Blouses instead of boys' shirts and they prefer them tucked in neatly, not flapping in the breeze around their knees.

—Simple, practical raincoats with hoods and good sturdy coats for school—these must be classic in style, not dressy.

—Small bags for school and dates—easy to carry because they "fit into your hand" and are just large enough for a handkerchief, comb, etc.

—Dainty costume jewelry, mainly pearls in small sizes, little scatter pins and narrow bracelets.

For tips on the care of oily skin with blackheads or pimples, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Elinor Williams in care of The Circleville Herald.

'Miss America' Lashes French Bathing Suits

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Non-drinking, non-smoking Bebe Shopp, 18-year-old reigning Miss America, took a firm stand today against the French style pantie-bra bathing suit.

The beautiful, milk-fed farm girl from Hopkins, Minn., who is making a tour of the Riviera and other famous European beaches to study swimming fashions and customs, denounced "those brief bathing suits." She said:

"They're indecent. I'm dead against the French-style bra and pantie costume. I don't think they're good for American girls."

Alley-Parking To Get Probe

Councilman Robert Adkins asked his colleagues of the Circleville legislative chamber to direct Safety Director C. O. Leist to serve notice against trucks and cars parking in alleys and damaging property.

He said a Pinckney street resident claimed her backyard fence had been damaged by such parking. Leist was instructed to investigate the problem.

Miss America contest "is not a cheap bathing belle competition. A pretty face and a good figure are not all-important. You must have plenty of talent and personality."

Miss Shopp asked newsmen not to refer to her as a "bathing beauty." She is due to reach Paris Saturday.

Medic Prepares Reply In Forged Insurance Case

TOLEDO, Aug. 3.—Dr. Frederic Howard, superintendent of the Roche Memorial hospital here, has until Aug. 29 to file briefs on a charge of forging a medical insurance payment.

Dr. Howard, center of a controversy over the management of the hospital, announced he would resist all attempts to oust him and charged the case was a "part of union strategy."

Dr. Walter Sloan, president of the Roche board of trustees, said that Earl Catton, president of the hospital union battling Dr. Howard's administration, had offered to "postpone" the court case if nine suspended employees were reinstated and paid for the time they had missed.

Catton, however, said that this was a falsehood and charged that Dr. Sloan had attempted to force him to withdraw the unions support of four suspended registered nurses.

A former patient of the hospital, who was illiterate, has charged that Dr. Howard forged his mark on the insurance papers.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By BILLY ROSE

One hot and disenchanted evening a couple of weeks ago, a bunch of us were sitting on my lawn in Mt. Kisco, chewing blades of grass and a little desultory fat.

"Let's talk about the Metropolitan Opera House," I suggested in my capacity as thoughtful host.

"It's too hot to be nasty," said Eleanor. "I've got a better idea — let's all tell about the biggest thrill we ever had in the theatre."

Herman Levin, whose next Broadway production will be a musical version of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," raised his hand. "The biggest kick I remember was Lawrence Olivier in 'Oedipus Rex,' screaming at the moon when he finds out that the woman he's married to is really his mother."

Jack O'Brien, formerly drama critic for the Associated Press, was next. "My nomination is the moment in 'Leave It To Me' when a kid from Texas named Mary Martin came out in a Gipsy snow scene and melted down the scenery and audience, singing 'My Heart Belongs to Daddy.'"

"MY BIGGEST wallop," memory-laned Deems Taylor,

Drivers Given New Slant On Highway Safety

Pickaway County motorists were given a new slant on safety habits Wednesday.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff pointed out that the "safe" driver today must be courteous to the point of self-defense.

"Protect yourself when you drive," he warned. "Be courteous, but remember that the other fellow driving along the road is a potential killer. Drive accordingly."

The sheriff pointed out three major self-defense driving habits which can be employed by local motorists:

1. Never completely trust hand signals. The other driver may be waving to a friend or feeling how thin his car paint is.
2. Guard against the driver who ignores "stop" signs.
3. Be on the alert for drivers who make wrong turns from the wrong lanes.

"One way to look at it is to remember 'the other fellow is crazy,'" cited the lawman. "He must be, or accidents wouldn't be as frequent here."

"A good habit slogan to remember is: Don't rely on the other guy," he concluded.

Sharks Nearing Swim Beaches

NEW YORK, Aug. 3 — The heat wave, which has lured millions of New Yorkers to beaches, today created a new menace which may keep many away.

The city's park department warned that the heat is luring sharks into what normally are too chilly waters.

Swimmers and lifeguards on Staten Island beaches were told to be on the lookout for sharks after several were sighted near the shore.

A motorboat "shark patrol" was established outside bathing areas at South Beach and Great Kills.

Fourth Person Held In Theft

DETROIT, Aug. 3—Four persons are now held in a $26,000 theft of narcotics from Ohio State university hospital.

The latest suspect was seized here yesterday when $3,000 worth of morphine and cocaine and hypodermic needles fell out of a portable radio he was checking in a bus station. He is George McHenry, 36, of Cincinnati.

McHenry said he got the narcotics from "a lady friend in Cincinnati who was mixed up in the theft." Police already have arrested Faye Marcella Candy, Arlington, 29, and are holding her in Cincinnati for the July 24 theft.

She gave police information that implicated Albert A. Howard, 26, a University hospital messenger, and Millard Bell, 39, a former orderly. Both are awaiting grand jury action.

Hornets Used By A-Scientists

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3—Scientists at the Brookhaven, Long Island, atomic laboratory will use hornets as flying geiger counters to detect leaks of radioactive substances unrecorded by mere machines.

The Atomic Energy Commission said today that for some reason known only to a hornet the nasty-tempered insects do on a diet of barium. Radioactive barium is a product of atom-splitting.

The scientists — heaven help them — will place hornets at key points near Brookhaven to see whether, by accumulating barium, they will uncover possible leaks long before they could be detected by instruments alone.

Ruth Blum Due To Appear In Chicago Concert

Ruth Blum of Circleville will go to Chicago next weekend to sing with the Indiana University Chorus in two performances on the Grant Park Summer concert series.

The IU Chorus of 180 voices will present Verdi's "Requiem" and "Te Deum" Saturday and Sunday evenings at 8 o'clock in Grant Park. Antal Dorati, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, will direct the University singers.

Accompanied by Dean Wilfred C. Bain and Prof. George F. Krueger of the IU School of Music, the chorus will leave for Chicago in chartered buses Friday afternoon and will return to Bloomington next Monday. During the weekend the group will be housed in University of Chicago dormitories.

Miss Blum, an honor music student both in Circleville high school and Indiana university, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Blum of 376 Watt street.

Senate Dean Dies In Hospital

COLUMBUS, Aug. 3 — Sen. Tom W. Jones, the 75-year-old dean of the Ohio General Assembly, died yesterday afternoon in St. Francis hospital here of a cerebral hemorrhage.

The Middleport Republican, in his 25th year as a state legislator, was admitted to the hospital at 10 a. m. yesterday and died late in the afternoon.

Jones was hospitalized earlier this year. He has been in failing health for the last few years.

Second Boy Feared Drowned

LORAIN, Aug. 3 — Coast Guardsmen searched the waters of Lake Erie near here today for the body of Larry Laurenti, 6, who is believed to have drowned with his playmate, Alexander J. Reid III, 7.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By BILLY ROSE

One hot and disenchanted evening a couple of week ends ago, a bunch of us were sitting on my lawn in Mt. Kisco, chewing blades of grass and a little desultory fat.

"Let's talk about the Metro-Goldwyn Opera House," I suggested in my capacity as thoughtful host.

"It's too hot to be nasty," said Eleanor. "I've got a better idea — let's all tell about the biggest thrill we ever had in the theatre."

Herman Levin, whose next Broadway production will be a musical version of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," raised his hand. "The biggest kick I remember was Lawrence Olivier in 'Oedipus Rex,' screeching at the moon when he finds out that the woman he's married to is really his mother."

Jack O'Brien, formerly drama critic for the Associated Press, was next. "My nomination is the moment in 'Leave It To Me' when a kid from Texas named Mary Martin came out in a Sierran snow scene and melted down the scenery and audience, singing 'My Heart Belongs to Daddy.'"

"MY BIGGEST wallop," memory-laned Deems Taylor,

Drivers Given New Slant On Highway Safety

Pickaway County motorists were given a new slant on safety habits Wednesday.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff pointed out that the "safe" driver today must be courteous to the point of self-defense.

"Protect yourself when you drive," he warned. "Be courteous, but remember that the other fellow driving along the road is a potential killer. Drive accordingly."

The sheriff pointed out three major self-defense driving habits which can be employed by local motorists:

1. Never completely trust hand signals. The other driver may be waving to a friend or feeling how thin his car paint is.
2. Guard against the driver who ignores "stop" signs.
3. Be on the alert for drivers who make wrong turns from the wrong lanes.

"One way to look at it is to remember 'the other fellow is crazy,'" cited the lawman. "He must be, or accidents wouldn't be as frequent here."

"A good habit slogan to remember is: Don't rely on the other guy," he concluded.

Sharks Nearing Swim Beaches

NEW YORK, Aug. 3 — The heat wave, which has lured millions of New Yorkers to beaches, today created a new menace which may keep many away.

The city's park department warned that the heat is luring sharks into what normally are too chilly waters.

Swimmers and lifeguards on Staten Island beaches were told to be on the lookout for sharks after several were sighted near the shore.

A motorboat "shark patrol" was established outside bathing areas at South Beach and Great Kills.

Fourth Person Held In Theft

DETROIT, Aug. 3—Four persons are now held in a $26,000 theft of narcotics from Ohio State university hospital.

The latest suspect was seized here yesterday when $3,000 worth of morphine and cocaine and hypodermic needles fell out of a portable radio he was checking in a bus station. He is George McHenry, 36, of Cincinnati.

McHenry said he got the narcotics from "a lady friend in Cincinnati who was mixed up in the theft." Police already have arrested Faye Marcella Candy Arlington, 29, and are holding her in Cincinnati for the July 24 theft.

She gave police information that implicated Albert A. Howard, 26, a University hospital messenger, and Millard Bell, 39, a former orderly. Both are awaiting grand jury action.

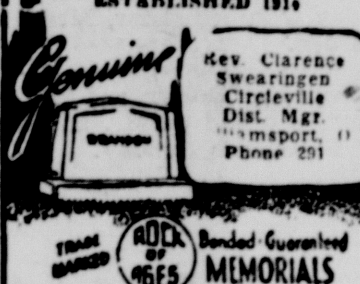

Hornets Used By A-Scientists

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3—Scientists at the Brookhaven, Long Island, atomic laboratory will use hornets as flying geiger counters to detect leaks of radioactive substances unrecorded by mere machines.

The Atomic Energy Commission said today that for some reason known only to a horner the nasty-tempered insects do on a diet of barium. Radioactive barium is a product of atom-splitting.

The scientists — heaven help them — will place hornets at key points near Brookhaven to see whether, by accumulating barium, they will uncover possible leaks long before they could be detected by instruments alone.

Ruth Blum Due To Appear In Chicago Concert

Ruth Blum of Circleville will go to Chicago next weekend to sing with the Indiana University Chorus in two performances on the Grant Park Summer concert series.

The IU Chorus of 180 voices will present Verdi's "Requiem" and "Te Deum" Saturday and Sunday evenings at 8 o'clock in Grant Park. Antal Dorati, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, will direct the University singers.

Accompanied by Dean Wilfred C. Bain and Prof. George F. Krueger of the IU School of Music, the chorus will leave for Chicago in chartered buses Friday afternoon and will return to Bloomington next Monday. During the weekend the group will be housed in University of Chicago dormitories.

Miss Blum, an honor music student both in Circleville high school and Indiana university, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Blum of 376 Watt street.

Second Boy Feared Drowned

LORAIN, Aug. 3 — Coast Guardsmen searched the waters of Lake Erie near here today for the body of Larry Laurenti, 6, who is believed to have drowned with his playmate, Alexander J. Reid III, 7.

The body of the Reid boy was found by Coast Guardsmen last night, a few hours after the two were last seen swimming together.

Authorities began the search when they found two complete suits of boys' clothing and shoes and stockings on the beach.

London Squire Said Embezzler

LONDON, Aug. 3—A 34-year-old London justice of the peace was free today under $1,500 bond awaiting September grand jury action on his plea of innocent to embezzling about $2,700 in public funds.

Attorney Harold E. Brown was charged yesterday before Justice Gerald Baynes at Lafayette. Prosecutor Forrest Sidener said alleged shortages in

Ashtville Woman Hurt In Crash

Mrs. Dotly Hay of near Ashtville suffered a possible fracture of her right leg and knee last weekend when her husband's auto figured in a two-car crash in Royalton.

State highway patrolmen said the woman had been riding with her husband, Glenn Hay, 51, when his car collided with an auto driven by Cecil Whittington of Columbus.

Hay was haled into Lancaster mayor's court where he received a fine of $10 and costs for failing to yield the right of way.

His accounts were discovered last week by a state examiner.

'Vampire Killer' Gets Much Mail

LONDON, Aug. 3 — Dapper John Haigh, Britain's convicted "vampire killer," was reported today setting a record for fan mail.

The London Daily Express said that the 39-year-old businessman, found guilty of the acid bath slaying of a 69-year-old London widow, is getting between 40 and 50 letters a day, mostly from women.

Haigh, under death sentence, admitted during his recent trial to nine other murders and claimed he drank his victim's blood.

Lad, 14, Killed By Gravel Truck

COLUMBUS, Aug. 3 — Fourteen-year-old Ned Roland Hawley was killed last yesterday when he was struck by a gravel-loaded truck while riding his bicycle near his Columbus home.

Police said young Hawley was hit by the side of the truck as it passed him, and that he fell beneath the rear dual wheels.

The driver, Thomas Thompson Jr., 21, said he did not see the boy cyclist because he was "watching out for" a girl who had cycled in front of him.

MINUTE OF SILENCE BACKED

Annual Babe Ruth Rites Idea Gathering Support

CHICAGO, Aug. 3—An annual tribute of a minute of silence at all baseball games in memory of Babe Ruth was a step nearer reality today.

Baseball Commissioner Happy Chandler, Minor League President George M. Trautman and other executives of the game from everywhere in the nation rallied to the proposal for a yearly "Babe Ruth Day" on Aug. 16, the anniversary of the Homerun King's death.

Chandler gave full approval of the suggestion and said he would recommend its passage at a meeting of major and minor league executives in Chicago Aug. 11.

Trautman said from his office in Columbus that "the minor leagues" will cooperate in every way possible in any program honoring the Babe.

GENERAL MANAGER Danny Menendez of the American Association's Kansas City Blues had

Braddock Agrees With Lesnevich:
Gus To Win Over Ezzard Charles

SUMMIT, N. J., Aug. 3—Gus Lesnevich put his head down into a wet cloth, so you could see the bald spot like a miniature traffic circle on the top of his skull. He said he felt young and full of fire.

To be truthful, said the 34-

For Brownies

BOWLING GREEN, Aug. 3—Lou Groza finally has arrived. The 240-pound Martins Ferry grinner, for two seasons merely a place-kicker and pressed into full-time tackle duty last year only through necessity, now rates as the second best offensive tackle in professional football.

His own coach, Paul Brown, is the authority for that statement. Brown announced yesterday at the Brown's Bowling Green training camp that "I have not one, but the two best offensive tackles in football."

Lou Rymkus, the 230-pound right tackle fixture for the Browns the last three years, long has been recognized by Brown as the outstanding offensive lineman in football.

Now Brown believes Groza has achieved similar recognition as a left tackle.

Huey Keeney of Rice, Frank Reno of West Virginia and Tom Finn of the University of Detroit were the latest to be pruned from the Browns' roster. All quit yesterday at their own request and have decided to give up football.

Competition Looming For Yankee
Girl Seeking To Conquer Channel

DOVER, Eng., Aug. 3—Shirley May France may have to swim an English Channel resembling a maritime Times Square.

While the blonde, 16-year-old Somerset, Mass., girl began showing signs of impatience, the seacoast town of Dover reported its busiest "channel season," with at least four other potential swimmers on hand, and many more expected.

For the second straight day, gales approaching 60-miles-per-hour lashed Dover, churning up heavy channel seas and sending huge waves over the boardwalk. Practice sessions by all of the hopefuls were sharply curtailed.

Entrants from Italy and Cuba are understood to be en route to Dover for the England-France swim, while one report says that five Egyptians are also Dover-bound.

Shirley's rivals for channel honors already on hand are Frau Willi Van Rysel, Dutch housewife who tried and failed once this year; Philip Mickman, British student; Dick Schermer, Dutch student and Dr. G. B. Brewster, who has tried the crossing 13 times and has yet to succeed.

JACK BURWILL, veteran Dover swimming trainer, watched Shirley practice in rough seas yesterday and said:

"I think the Americans have got a winner."

Burwill added:

"I've seen all the channel swimmers of the last 20 years and I crossed with Gertrude Ederle. But Shirley May looks as good as any of them."

"I will add I think she's the best of the four here now. She's easily the most buoyant swimmer I have ever seen. I was amazed to see her floating on her back today on those rough waves."

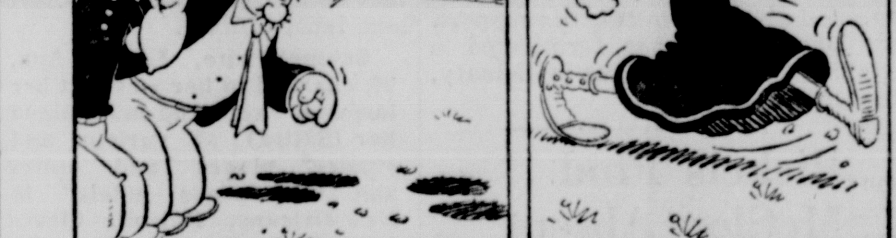

Despite the rough channel seas and the unfavorable weather of the last few days, Shirley still has her heart set on making the attempt before her 17th birthday on Aug. 11.

Local Waterworks Spends $70,376 For Improvements

Department Report For Year Given

Income Total Set At $65,367

A Circleville waterworks financial report for the fiscal year July 31, 1948, to July 31, 1949, shows a total expenditure of $70,376.29.

Waterworks Manager Ervin Leist said receipts for the period were $65,367.18, which added to the 1948 balance of $12,578.54 give a total for the period of $77,945.72.

Leist said that out of the total sum for expenditures, $25,128.79 was spent for extensions and improvements to the water system. Balance for July 31 was given as $7,569.43.

Out of a $40,000 fund, reserved from the original $460,000 bond issue for improvements, only $4,500.58 remains Leist said. He added that the money has been spent for a new chlorinator, a dual drive 1,000 gallon per minute pump, the well point system, and a new heating unit for the pump station.

THE ORIGINAL bond issue provided for sale of bonds totaling $550,000, he explained. But of this only $460,000 in bonds were sold, leaving $90,000 to go. Since the water plant cost the city $420,000 the rest of the money was set aside for expenses entailed in a program of improvement.

"The pending water suit is holding up the sale of the remaining $90,000 in bonds. Completion of the remaining parts of the original program if improvement can not be accomplished until the suit of the attorneys is settled," Leist said.

The suit to which Leist refers is being brought against the City of Circleville by Tom A. Renick and J. W. Adkins, attorneys, to collect $27,500 which they claim is due them in fees and expenses for their work in arranging details of the water plant purchase in 1946.

The case is expected to be tried sometime next Fall in Ross County.

A change of venue was granted the attorneys by Judge William D. Radcliff after they filed a motion in Pickaway County common pleas court stating that they did not believe they could obtain a fair trial in this county.

Leist said that out of a sinking fund balance of $35,675.25, a total of $20,862.75 has been spent for bonds and interest, leaving a balance of $14,812.50. Total balance in all funds was given as $26,862.51 for the fiscal year.

For the calendar year of 1948 Leist said 85 cents out of every dollar received by the waterworks came from metered sales, and 14 cents from all other receipts.

THESE INCLUDE fire hydrants, sprinkler systems, and miscellaneous water users. Leist said an example of the last would be a circus or carnival coming to town and being charged a flat fee for water.

Out of each dollar coming in, Leist said 30 cents is spent for operation, 25 cents for capital expenses, such as improvements to the water system and new services, and 35 cents goes to the sinking fund to retire the debt. Other expenses take three cents out of each dollar, leaving a net income of seven cents.

Long-Disputed Bakery Bill Paid By Councilmen

Circleville city fathers decided to pay the long-disputed Ed. Wallace bakery bill during their regular meeting Tuesday night. The bill has been pending since 1942.

A claim for $69.36 was presented to the city by Wallace for supplies delivered to Berger hospital. A question arose over the legality of the transaction, since Wallace was a member of city council at the time the supplies were sold.

The arguments, pro and con, for paying the bill have arisen intermittently in council over a period of years. Last night the city fathers decided to argue no more.

The ordinance, which had been tabled after a third reading last June, was brought back to the floor. It was passed by a vote of five, with Councilman Ray Cook abstaining.

Cook said that while he "was not against the ordinance, moral scruples" kept him from voting on it.

eration 76 cents goes for the payroll, 16 cents for power and fuel, and eight cents for other expenses including chlorine, insurance, telephone, and the department's share of the public employee's retirement system.

"This is just about the national average," Leist said.

FDR's Daughter Given Divorce

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 3—Anna Roosevelt Boettiger, daughter of the late President, was back in Los Angeles today after a Phoenix divorce court session at which the judge expressed a hope that she would "find some nice boy you'll be happy with."

Mrs. Boettiger, 43, and soon to become a grandmother, was granted a default divorce from her publisher husband, John Boettiger, on her plea of desertion.

She was awarded custody of their 10-year-old son, John Jr., and $100 a month for his support. The proceedings terminated a marriage that began in January, 1935.

Satira Named In Alimony Suit By Salupo Wife

CLEVELAND, Aug. 3—Satira, exotic night club dancer and 1947 slayer of her married lover aboard a yacht in Havana harbor, has been named correspondent in a Cleveland alimony action.

The 24-year-old dancer from Toledo, otherwise known as Patricia Schmidt, was identified yesterday in a suit filed in Cuyahoga County common pleas court as the girl friend of Sebastian Salupo, 35-year-old Cleveland labor official.

Salupo's wife, Louise Ann, 34, charged in her suit that her husband "kept and maintained her (Satira) at various and sundry places and suites and first class hotels" in New Orleans, Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis, New York, Chicago, and presently Calumet City, Ill.

Mrs. Salupo further charged that Salupo and Satira spent last weekend together in Calumet City, where she was appearing.

Salupo is business agent for Local 152 of the CIO-Laundry Workers Union in Cleveland and also business agent for a CIO-United Electrical Workers Union local in Cincinnati, where he also maintains a residence.

Mrs. Salupo is seeking support for herself and her three children.

Miss Schmidt was freed only last October under a presidential pardon in Cuba for the Havana harbor slaying.

"U.S. AA" ON A PACKAGE OF BUTTER

The Department of Agriculture says that U. S. A. A. on the carton or certificate means the butter has been found to have a "fine, highly pleasing flavor".

When the butter has a "pleasing and desirable" flavor it is marked and graded as U. S. A. A.

Grades B and C are determined on the same basis each having a slightly greater variation in flavor texture and color. If defects are found the grade is reduced accordingly.

Grade (CG) is classified as Cooking Grade because it is best suited to that use.

Butter Grading has been a Government Service since 1919. In 1948 about 244 million pounds of butter were Government Graded.
